Liberian woman starts quest to help homeland

West Philadelphia. One woman will be sending a massive care package to her Ebola-stricken nation.

Priscilla Debleye stands in her home next to 25 cases, almost 100 gallons, of bleach that she plans to ship to Liberia. / CHARLES MOSTOLLER, METRO

In the face of the deteriorating Ebola crisis, Liberian immigrant Priscilla Debleye, 56, of West Philadelphia, at first felt devastated.

"When Ebola struck, I was feeling so helpless," she said. "I had just returned from Liberia in March."

But as the reality set in, Debleye was inspired to help in any way she could.

"I was like, 'I can collect sanitizer,'" she said. "And now, my house is filled with Clorox."

For weeks, Debleye has been collecting Clorox bleach, cleaning wipes and Purell hand sanitizer, donated by friends and coworkers.

"This is very little to us, here, but to them, this is like a godsend," said Debleye, a lab assistant.

She plans to use her savings to send the supplies to Nimba County, the area where her hometown, Gipo, is located, far from most medical facilities.

While the Ebola infection rate in Liberia is reportedly stabilizing, the country is dealing with new crises related to the Ebola outbreak.

Many Liberians say that a shortage of medical professionals and supplies and famine have caused almost as much death as Ebola.

"There's a food shortage. Food is one of the bigger needs," said Solomon Muin, secretary general of the Philadelphia Coalition of West African Nations Affected by Ebola.

Muin and many other Liberians in the area are working together on "Operation Crush Ebola" — an attempt to collect medical supplies, food and other necessities of life to send to Liberia.

Rev. Moses Suah Dennis, head of the Liberian Ministers' Association of the Delaware Valley, said that Ebola is still a huge concern in West Africa.

"It is stabilizing in Liberia. It's not escalating like it was," Dennis said. "But the bad news is in Guinea and Sierra Leone, it's going in the opposite direction."

While Operation Crush Ebola is collecting a truly massive amount of goods, Debleye chose to collect only as much as she can afford to ship herself.

"I want our Liberian community here in Pennsylvania to know that one person can make a difference," Debleye said. "If every one of us that is here, if every Liberian does this, it will come out good."

SEPTA. Union OKs contract, members won't strike today

Transport Workers Union Local 234 voted overwhelmingly over the weekend to ratify a two-year contract with SEPTA, averting a strike that threatened to cripple bus and rail lines.

The contract, which puts off a final resolution on pension reform and medical benefits, was approved by about three-quarters of TWU members who took part in the ratification vote on Friday.

Union leaders had warned a strike would start today if the agreement, which they had urged the groups 5,000 members to approve, was not ratified.

The agreement between SEPTA and TWU provides a 5 percent pay hike over two years and a one-time "pension bonus" of $175 per year of service for any worker who retires in the next two years.

During the contract, the union and the transportation authority will negotiate over how to restructure pension plans and over medical benefits, because those issues were deemed too complex to address at this time, according to a union newsletter on the organization's website.

Facts

SEPTA has an annual operating budget of $1.3 million.

- The transit company services nearly 360 million riders a year.
- The average pay for a SEPTA operator is about $60,000 a year with overtime.

Southwest. Police car burns after collision with civilian vehicle

Two Good Samaritans helped pull a police officer and a civilian from their vehicles after a car crash Saturday afternoon.

Officer Mark Kimsey, 30, had his lights and sirens activated driving west on Tasker Street when another driver, 52, in a 2004 Ford Tacoma, turned into the intersection at 28th Street, crashing into the officer around 5:22 p.m. on Saturday.

Both drivers were trapped in their vehicles. Reports say Joe Chambers, 17, and Dante Johnson, 24, rushed to their aid.

The police officer sustained head injuries from his air bag, as well as burns to his hands and legs. The civilian driver sustained head injuries.

Both drivers were hospitalized in stable condition.

After the accident, the police officer's vehicle became "engulfed in flames" and firefighters responded to bring the fire under control.

No drivers left the scene of the accident, no drivers were suspected of DUI and there were no passengers in either vehicle, police said.

Gifts for kids

Who you're helping

Metro Philadelphia is once again teaming up with the Institute for the Development of African American Youth.

IDAAY was founded by S. Archye Leacock in 1991 when he was a Ph.D. student at Temple. He was impacted by violence in his North Philadelphia neighborhood and started IDAAY. Since then, IDAAY has been offering education, training, prevention, and more to at-risk youth.

The families of IDAAY will receive gifts made possible by you.

"The toys we received from Metro last year really impacted our young people's lives and they were able to have a more fulfilled holiday season," Leacock said. "For Metro to donate to our young people, it shows them that not only IDAAY, but persons beyond our community also care about their well being." METRO

Tony's Metro Magic brings holiday cheer

Giving. Metro kicks off its fifth annual toy drive, which lets you help to brighten a child's holiday.

It's the most wonderful time of the year again — when Metro launches Tony's Metro Magic, our annual toy drive for underprivileged children in Boston, New York and Philadelphia.

This year marks the fifth anniversary of the appeal, which was renamed last year in memory of the man who oversaw the project for more than three years, Tony Metcalf, Metro's longest-running editor-in-chief, who passed away in July 2013 from cancer at the age of 50.

There was nothing Metcalf loved more than to see the smiles on the countless children's faces each year as they opened gifts generously donated by Metro readers.

"Year after year, we are astonished at how well Metro readers respond to Tony's Metro Magic," said Metro CEO and Publisher Yggers Mortensen. "It is wonderful to see the gifts stack up at our Metro offices and to realize that we are all helping to make a needy child's holiday more joyful."

Once again this year, we'll be asking readers to contribute what they can to Tony's Metro Magic, which, since its inception, has donated thousands of toys to children for whom there would otherwise be no gifts over the holidays.

In conjunction with Toys For Tots, Metro has established a wish list at the Toys "R" Us website that readers can access by going to Metro.us and clicking on the Metro Magic bar.

From there, choose the toys you wish to donate, pay online using Toys "R" Us' secure payment system and your gifts, along with your name, will be delivered to Metro's office.

So starting today, and throughout November and December, we will be reminding readers to donate both in print and online at www.metro.us.

This season, we hope you remember the children who will spend the holidays in shelters or who may not have gifts to open. Even one small gift can make a big difference. METRO

How to take part

1 Look for the Tony's Metro Magic logo set up at the top of our newly designed website, Metro.us.

2 One click on the Metro Magic logo will take you directly to a "Wish List" that we have set up on the website via a secure link on ToysRUs.com.

3 Once there, you can see all the toys we've already requested for kids, and more are being added daily. Simply select the toys you want and purchase them.

That's it! Selecting only the toys on our Wish List ensures all the gifts will be shipped to our offices.

Lynch. Obama's choice for attorney general avoids political tangles

Loretta Lynch, the 55-year-old native of Greensboro, North Carolina, made history when President Barack Obama made her the first black woman nominated to become the top U.S. law enforcement officer.

As the top federal prosecutor in Brooklyn, Lynch has been tough on terrorism and cyber crimes.

She received a polite response so far from Republicans, but Obama urged the Senate to act quickly on the nomination.

The Senate will remain in Democratic control until January. A spokesman for Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid said Democrats haven't decided whether they will try to confirm Lynch before Republicans take over. BLOOMBERG

Flip a coin on Jeb Bush in 2016

There's a "50-50" chance that former Florida Gov. Jeb Bush will seek the Republican presidential nomination in 2016, according to his older brother, former President George W. Bush.

"I'd give it a toss-up," the 43rd president said in an interview that aired on CBS's "Face the Nation" on Sunday. "I know this about Jeb. He is not afraid to succeed. In other words, I think he knows he could do the job. And nor is he afraid to fail." BLOOMBERG

Obama defends plan on immigration: Interview

Reforms. Obama said he has waited long enough for Congress to act on undocumented immigrants.

A young girl whose father was deported cries during a protest in response to President Obama's delay on immigration reform in front of the White House in September. / GETTY IMAGES

President Barack Obama defended his plan to use executive powers to implement some immigration reforms, saying in an interview on Sunday he had waited long enough for Congress to act.

Republican leaders warned that an ease to some restrictions on undocumented immigrants would "poison the well" or would be "a red flag in front of a bull."

The meeting came after the Democrats were punished in midterm elections last Tuesday. Republicans seized the Senate and kept a majority in the House of Representatives, in what Obama said was a message from voters who held him responsible for how Washington worked, or didn't.

In an interview on CBS' "Face the Nation," Obama said he had watched while the Senate produced a bipartisan immigration reform bill, only to have it not taken up by House Republican Speaker John Boehner.

Obama said he had told Boehner if he could not get it done by year's end, the White House was going to have to take steps to improve the system.

He said borders need to be secure, the legal immigration system needs to be more efficient and there needs to be a path to legal status for the 11 million undocumented immigrants. REUTERS

"Everybody agrees the immigration system's broken. And we've been talking about it for years now in terms of fixing it."

Nurse who fought Maine Ebola quarantine moving out of state

A nurse who treated Ebola patients in West Africa and publicly fought quarantine orders in New Jersey and Maine after returning to the United States last month has decided to move away from her home state, a newspaper in Maine reported.

Kaci Hickox and her boyfriend, Ted Wilbur, plan to leave Maine after Nov. 10, or the expiration of the monitoring period for the virus' 21-day incubation, according to the Press Herald newspaper.

Wilbur did not say where the couple planned to move. "We're going to try to get our lives back on track," he told the newspaper on Friday.

Wilbur and Hickox could not immediately be reached for comment.

After criticizing New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie over the forced isolation, she was driven to her boyfriend's home in Fort Kent, in Maine's far north, where Gov. Paul LePage ordered her quarantined even though she had tested negative for the virus. REUTERS

Americans released by N. Korea reunited with their families

Free. UN Secretary General Ban Ki-moon said in a statement he was "relieved" the Americans were returning home.

Two Americans freed Saturday by North Korea after a secret mission by a top U.S. intelligence official to secure their release were reunited with loved ones after arriving at Joint Base Lewis-McChord in Washington state.

"It's been an amazing two years, I learned a lot," Kenneth Bae, a Korean-American tour guide and missionary detained two years ago, told media upon his arrival at the base, the Associated Press reported.

Bae and Matthew Miller, who had been sentenced to years of hard labor for committing "hostile" acts against the Kim Jong Un regime, traveled to the U.S. accompanied by American intelligence chief James Clapper, who negotiated the men's freedom in a one-day trip to North Korea, the first by a senior U.S. official in about two years.

The Obama administration's efforts to free the men should not be viewed as a "diplomatic signal," said a senior U.S. official traveling with President Barack Obama to Asia, who spoke on the condition of not being identified. REUTERS

Germany marks 25 years since fall of Berlin Wall

More than a million Germans and people from around the world on Sunday celebrated the 25th anniversary of the fall of the Berlin Wall, the event that marked the end of the Cold War.

A spectacular 15-kilometer-long string of 7,000 illuminated helium balloons traced the course of the barrier that once snaked through the city, slicing across streets, between families and even through graveyards.

They were set free one after another into the night sky, symbolizing the breaching of the Wall by crowds of protesters in 1989. The Berlin Staatskapelle orchestra played Beethoven's 9th Symphony "Ode to Joy" in front of the Brandenburg Gate. REUTERS

Cable TV. PETA criticizes 'Eaten Alive' TV show for animal cruelty

Animal rights group PETA has slammed the Discovery Channel's "Eaten Alive" show, which claims it will show a man being eaten alive by an anaconda, as a publicity stunt that will torment the snake.

Trailers of the show, which will air Dec. 7 on the cable network, show naturalist and wildlife filmmaker and author Paul Rosolie donning a custom-built snake-proof outfit.

"I am about to be the first person that is going to be eaten alive by an anaconda," Rosalie says in the trailer as his team is shown catching a snake. "I don't expect anyone to believe us until we show it."

Although PETA said the premise of the show sounds far-fetched, if the description is accurate the snake will be tormented. It added that whether it is a hoax or not, it has asked the network to pull the show.

Fully grown anacondas can grow to more than 29 feet in length and weigh over 550 pounds. / GETTY IMAGES

"Anacondas go days without eating and expend the energy needed to do so selectively. Making this snake use up energy by swallowing this fool and then possibly regurgitating him would have left the poor animal exhausted and deprived of the energy that he or she needs," PETA said in a statement.

Apart from the trailer, which also shows the search and capturing of an anaconda, the world's largest snake species in a South American rainforest, the network has not released any information about the show. REUTERS

Cloud of pot smoke puts Colo. school on partial lockdown

A high school in Colorado, one of the first two U.S. states to legalize recreational marijuana use, was put on partial lockdown on Friday after a student's weed pipe filled a classroom with pot smoke, the school said.

The smoke from the device, known as a "gravity bong" or "bucket," was released into a classroom at about 9:45 a.m. at Adams City High School in Commerce City, a northeastern suburb of Denver.

"As a precautionary measure, our students were placed on a modified lockdown to limit movement throughout the school," the school said in a statement, adding that teenagers who had been near the device were examined by medical personnel. REUTERS

Chef faces jail, fines for feeding the homeless

For decades, 90-year-old Arnold Abbott has hauled pans filled with roast chicken and cheese-covered potatoes onto a S outh Florida beach park to feed hundreds of homeless people.

For his good deeds, Abbott finds himself facing up to two months in jail and hundreds of dollars in fines after new laws that restrict public feeding of the homeless went into effect earlier this year.

He was first cited last Sunday, along with two clergy and a volunteer from his nonprofit, Love Thy Neighbor. REUTERS

Famed for her doll-like features, Valeria Lukyanova claims she was assaulted outside her Odessa home. / FACEBOOK

Q & A. 'Human Barbie' opens up about attack on Halloween night

Valeria Lukyanova, the self-proclaimed "Human Barbie," is nursing facial wounds after reportedly being attacked last week outside her home in Odessa, Ukraine. The 29-year-old model suffered swollen lips and minor head injuries following an assault on Halloween night that she alleged was the result of a two-year hate campaign by anonymous stalkers. Metro spoke to Lukyanova, who gained worldwide fame for her doll-like face.

How did the attack happen?
I came back home from a shop with bags and entered the door code when two men rushed from the dark and attacked me. They were waiting, I heard footsteps but did not realize that something like this could happen. I wanted to run, but they tethered me with a rope. I tried to free myself, but they cut my lips. I screamed. They hit me on the head. Then the second man hit me in the jaw. Then they ran away. Later in the hospital doctors told me that they had to remove two of my teeth. I did not see who attacked me. I only know that they were two men who were as small as I am.

You have had threats in the past, so why didn't you have insurance?
That's true, I receive threats every day. But still nobody dared to do something to me. I'm sure that this attack was made by one of my detractors on the Internet. Because in reality I never have any conflicts. I didn't have insurance, because I had no idea this would happen.

Have you recovered?
My "outside" is already in order. But my "inside" is still recovering. The doctors had to stitch something on the inside of my mouth. I do use makeup, but no one can see it because I wear sunglasses. Everyone knows me, so I do not want them to persecute me.

What precautions do you now take following this incident?
We have already installed a door with a combination lock where the attackers entered. So, now nobody can enter the garden in front of my house.

Changing the subject, you claim that the only augmentation you have had is for your breasts. So what's the secret in having such an eye-catching figure?
I always eat raw food from fruits and vegetables. My daily menu contains peppers, cabbage, apples, pears and kiwis.

DMITRY BELYAEV, METRO WORLD NEWS

Question

How do you feel about what is happening in Ukraine?

The authorities are manipulating people to make more money. I'm sure there is mafia involved. Ukraine, Russia and the United States are all at fault. But I believe the U.S. the most, because they acted aggressively from the beginning. Everyone says that Ukrainians and Russians have become enemies. This is just "brainwashing" served up by the press. I have good relations with Russians, I have family living there. My friends in Ukraine also talk to people in Russia. Nobody fights.

Massacre gaffe. Mexico attorney general: 'I've had enough' questions

Mexican Attorney General Jesus Murillo Karam speaks at a press conference in Mexico City. / GETTY IMAGES

After weeks of fielding questions about the abduction and apparent massacre of 43 trainee teachers by corrupt police aligned with drug gang members, Mexico's Attorney General Jesus Murillo has had enough.

He's not the only one.

Facing a grilling over the details of the case, which has sent shockwaves across Mexico and triggered outrage at impunity, Murillo sought to wrap up a news conference on Friday evening, arching his eyebrows with the aside "Ya me canse," or "I've had enough."

The phrase came shortly after he told the press that the trainee teachers were apparently incinerated by drug gang henchmen and their remains tipped in a garbage dump and a river.

Murillo's words have gone viral, with #YaMeCanse and #estoycansado (I'm tired) among the most trending hashtags on Twitter in Mexico.

Protesters who have railed against the government's handling of the case sprayed the phrase "I've had enough ... of fear" on the entrance of the Attorney General's office overnight on Sunday.

Many tweeters said that like Murillo, they were tired — but of impunity, injustice and corrupt politicians.

Some tweeted that if Murillo was so tired, he should resign.

One tweet juxtaposed a picture of Murillo stamped with his refrain, next to a photo of President Enrique Pena Nieto emblazoned with the phrase: "I'm off to China."

Pena Nieto, who has sought to shift public attention off grisly gang violence and onto a raft of economic reforms, is due to make a state visit to China next week to woo investment.

The parents of some of the trainee teachers have warned Pena Nieto to think hard about whether he should go to China under the circumstances.

Tens of thousands of people have taken to the streets of Mexico City and those of the southwestern state of Guerrero where the students were abducted in recent weeks to decry the government's handling of the case.

Six weeks into the investigation, the government has yet to confirm the students' fate.

The case is the toughest challenge yet to face Pena Nieto, who took office two years ago vowing to restore order in Mexico, where about 100,000 people have died in violence linked to organized crime since 2007.

ISIS leader's fate unclear after latest strikes

Islamic State leader Abu Bakr al-Baghdadi was targeted and may have been injured in strikes by U.S. and allied aircraft.

Airstrikes on a gathering of leaders of the extremist group near Mosul destroyed a 10-vehicle convoy on Friday, and military officials were still working on Sunday to determine if al-Baghdadi was present, Lt. Colonel Tom Crosson, a Defense Department spokesman, said in an email.

Al Sumaria, a pro-government news service, reported that two al-Baghdadi associates were killed by coalition airstrikes Saturday in al-Qaim, near the border with Syria, without mentioning the group's leader. Dubai-based Al Arabiya television, citing Arab tribal sources, reported that al-Baghdadi may have been seriously injured in the raid.

Macaulay Culkin laughed off a Facebook death hoax this weekend by tweeting a "Weekend at Bernie's"-style photo of him from the Twitter account of his band, The Pizza Underground. 3 Andy Dick busted by the cops, also the sun rose today

Andy Dick is in trouble with the law, which I know shouldn't count as news, but he allegedly stole a necklace from a man on Hollywood Boulevard last week, according to TMZ. Dick was reportedly riding his bike and asked the guy if he could see his chain, reportedly valued at $1,000. Recognizing Dick as famous, the guy said yes, and Dick took it and rode away. The owner of the necklace reported the theft, and cops nabbed Dick this weekend. I'm hoping his legal team goes with the "It's Andy Dick, what did the guy expect?" defense.

2 Poor Mark Zuckerberg found 'The Social Network' 'hurtful'

In not-so-surprising news, Mark Zuckerberg didn't enjoy "The Social Network." The topic of the Aaron Sorkin-written film came up at a live Facebook Q&A. "They went out of their way in the movie to try to get some interesting details correct, like the design of the office," he says. "But on the overarching plot, in terms of why we're building Facebook to help connect the world, or how we did it, they just kind of made up a bunch of stuff that I found kind of hurtful." What hurt the most? "They kind of made up this whole plot line about how I somehow decided to create Facebook to, I think, attract girls," he says.

Here's how to get over the 'Too Many Cooks' theme

Looking for something to get the "Too Many Cooks" theme out of your head? (See page 18 if you don't know what we're talking about.) Jon Cozart, the talented film student behind the Disney parody "After Ever After," teamed up with fellow YouTuber Peter Hollens for "Boy Brand," a sickeningly catchy medley mocking the titans of boy banddom. The harmonies are tight, and the jokes at the expense of the bands — particularly N*SYNC and Backstreet Boys — are genuinely funny, if a little mean.

See 'Green Porno' live

"I CAME UP WITH THE IDEA BECAUSE IT'S FUNNY AND EVERYONE IS INTERESTED IN SEX," SAYS ROSSELLINI. WIREIMAGE

Web series. Isabella Rossellini will teach you how lobsters have sex.

She's been directed by David Lynch. She's been the face of Lancome. And she's explained animal mating rituals through her online series "Green Porno." Now Isabella Rossellini takes a live version of the very stylized, tongue-in-cheek reenactments of animal copulation to Philadelphia. Part education, part performance art, "Green Porno" — which is not nearly as vulgar as "porno" implies — is a wonderfully smart and quirky window into the animal kingdom.

How did you come up with the idea of "Green Porno"?
I always liked animals, ever since I was a little girl. I always wanted to study animal behavior, but it wasn't really available when I was little. I ended up in modeling and acting instead of studying, but I remained interested. Six or seven years ago Sundance offered me — and others — a chance to do short films. I came up with the idea because it's funny and everyone is interested in sex.

You've taken "Green Porno" on the road before. What is it like performing it live rather than filming in a studio?
It was difficult in the beginning to remember 60 pages by heart, but now I know them and I'm very secure. It's wonderful to perform in front of an audience. I've done the show in French and in Italian, but I've done it the most in English, so it's really in my head that way.

The costumes and props are stylized and very distinct. Who makes them, and what is that process like?
When I write the script, I illustrate it. I get the basics down. Then I work with Rick Gilbert and Andy Byers. They bring a lot of detail and wonderful ideas. I don't write the script and say, "It's up to you to make me a fly." I think of the basic solution and they give it this genius homemade effect.

Isabella Rossellini brings "Green Porno" to World Cafe Live (3025 Walnut St.) Friday at 8 p.m. Tickets ($37.50) are available at www.worldcafelive.com. / SUNDANCETV

Bonus question

While "Green Porno" is very successful, it's not your typical series. Were you surprised at people's reactions?
They reacted better than I expected. It was an experiment on a new canvas — the Internet and mobile devices — and I didn't expect to get millions of hits. I didn't expect it to become my principal activity.

'TOO MANY COOKS' IS MORE THAN A VIRAL SENSATION

Behold just six of the many, many, many faces in "Too Many Cooks." / PROVIDED

'Too Many Cooks'

AdultSwim.com

First aired during the 4 a.m. slot on the Cartoon Network, the Adult Swim-birthed short "Too Many Cooks" somehow became a viral sensation, despite being powerfully and brilliantly weird. It's a pastiche of the feel-good opening credits of nice '80s sitcoms like "Full House" and "My Two Dads," with actors freezing in goofy poses as their names pop up, all against a blood-curdlingly catchy theme song. (And the one here is scarily spot-on. "Too Many Cooks" may run 11 minutes but the song will stay in your head for a lifetime.)

But it offers more than repetition-as-a-joke (though that would have been funny too). It keeps changing, turning into a work sitcom, then a cop show, then a "G.I. Joe"-style toon and so on. And then there's that pudgy, machete-wielding psychopath who soon hacks up the ever-swelling cast. What starts off snarky turns genuinely creepy before destroying itself in a blaze of glory.

'Batman Returns'

Of course Tim Burton's two-film hold on the Caped Crusader franchise would slip online as theaters get "Birdman," which finds Michael Keaton mocking his faded A-list status. If you need your old-school Bruce Wayne fix, do the second one, which is not only darker but features a romance — between our hero and Michelle Pfeiffer's thrillingly hammy Catwoman — played out in leather and whips. Kaitlyn Dever, center, plays one of the more wild teens in "Laggies." / A24

Kaitlyn Dever playing her age

Interview. The "Laggies" star hates when teen movies don't actually star teens. (And "Laggies" does.)

Kaitlyn Dever has had some heavy roles recently. Last summer she played a troubled teen with a history of self harm in the drama "Short Term 12." Earlier this month saw the release of "Men, Women & Children," in which her high school character had to contend with a monstrously nosy mom (Jennifer Garner), who traces and polices her every online /cellular move. In the new "Laggies," she's Misty, a fun, wild teen who ropes an immature 28-year-old (Keira Knightley) into her circle of friends (including Chloe Grace Moretz).

Not that Dever isn't used to tonal jumping. Her day job is the Tim Allen sitcom "Last Man Standing," now in its fourth season. And even before "Short Term 12" she was jumping between "J. Edgar" and "Party Down," "Justified" and "Modern Family." She's humble about it. "I want to do comedy and drama and show people my diversity," she says.

Dever says her "Laggies" character isn't that much of a stretch for her. "Misty is me at a really hyper, insane level," she explains. "We're both sarcastic, with this dry, deadpan sense of humor."

"Laggies" also gave her the chance to work with director Lynn Shelton, known for improv-heavy, high-concept indies like "Humpday" and "Your Sister's Sister." This one has no improv, but still had the same freewheeling feel onset.

"I remember laughing a lot," Dever recalls. "Everyone was a family. We all had this nice feeling coming to work every day." When her friends in L.A. found out Dever was going to work with Shelton, they all freaked out. Apart from being talented, Shelton is giggly and friendly. "It's always nice to work with people who are genuinely good, and only in the business and doing films because they love it. That is Lynn," Dever says.

Dever, 17, also loved that it was a film about teenagers actually starring teenagers, not 20-somethings (or even 30-somethings) pretending to be in high school. "When I see movies where the teenagers aren't played by teenagers, it's not real. They're not teenagers," she says. "That's what was cool about 'Laggies' and 'Men, Women & Children': They had real teenagers."

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

The truth

Just a teen

Dever takes umbrage with people who think she, Moretz and those like her are too business minded. "Sometimes people think we're not teenagers because we're in movies, that we're strictly professional," she says. "I'm a total teenager. I guess I am more mature, but I think that's just how I grew up."

Of course, Dever will soon have to contend with getting offered teenage roles in her 20s. "I hope I do 20-year-old roles when I'm 20," she says.

Michael Caine meets Stephen Hawking

MICHAEL CAINE
GETTY IMAGES

Interview. Being in a movie about outer space meant the "Interstellar" star got to hang with another legend.

Michael Caine's work in Christopher Nolan's new film, "Interstellar," gave him the chance to become friendly with theoretical physicist Kip Thorne, who in turn introduced Caine to Hawking — who himself only had one thing on his mind: Caine's wife.

Michael Caine plays a physicist trying to save humankind in "Interstellar."
MELINDA SUE GORDON, PARAMOUNT, WARNER BROS.

When Christopher Nolan explained this project to you, how did you wrap your head around it?
Well, I was fascinated by it because I knew Kip Thorne's book about black holes and all that stuff, and then I found out that Kip Thorne was the technical adviser. And then he introduced me to Stephen Hawking, who came and saw the movie.

What was your interaction with him like?
He can hear every word you say, but he can only reply on the computer with a muscle in his eye. One muscle in the corner of his eye, it's down to that. I met him in the corridor with Kip, and Kip said, "Stephen's got a message for you. He wants to meet your wife." [Laughs] He loves the ladies. Every pretty girl that was around, I introduced him to the lot of them.

Recurring star

Nolan's regular

At what point do you just assume that you're the voice of reason in Christopher Nolan's head?
I seem to be that all the time, don't I? [Laughs] I'm always the one who's sort of there representing the people who stayed behind. Like in [the Batman films], I was the realist, saying, "You're going to do what? You're going to put on a suit and go to the top of the building?" I seem to represent the people on Earth who don't go out and actually do the things. But in some cases, as in this picture, I'm the one who thinks it up.

Maybe next time he'll let you go on the mission.
No, I'm too old now.

Inflatable robot movie has a 'stellar' weekend

Box office. To the shock of most, "Big Hero 6" edged past the latest Nolan flick.

The adorable fellas from "Big Hero 6" upset Christopher Nolan's "Interstellar." / DISNEY

Top 5 earners

1. 'Big Hero 6' $56.2 million
2. 'Interstellar' $50 million
3. 'Gone Girl' $6.1 million
4. 'Ouija' $6 million
5. 'St. Vincent' $5.7 million

"Big Hero 6," Walt Disney's animated superhero film featuring an inflatable, sometimes flying robot, clocked $56.2 million in U.S. and Canadian ticket sales to lead the weekend box office, topping director Christopher Nolan's space adventure, "Interstellar."

"Interstellar," starring Matthew McConaughey, opened on Wednesday and recorded $50 million over the three days from Friday through Sunday, and $52.2 million over five days.

If the final figures hold up, it would be only the fourth time in history that two new films had hit the $50 million mark on the same debut weekend, the last time being June 2013 with "Monsters University" and "World War Z," box office tracking firm Rentrak said.

"Gone Girl," director David Fincher's hit starring Ben Affleck as a husband suspected of murdering his wife, was third with $6.1 million, according to estimates from Rentrak. It has taken in more than $145 million since opening on Oct. 3.

Rounding out the top five, low-budget "Ouija," the top film for the past two weeks, made $6 million while the Bill Murray-Melissa McCarthy comedy "St. Vincent" was No. 5 with $5.7 million.

The Stephen Hawking biopic "The Theory of Everything," starring Eddie Redmayne and Felicity Jones, had the fourth-best per-screen-average of the year, grossing $207,000 from just five theaters. It expands Friday. REUTERS

COMEDY

'Key & Peele'

Normally we don't put reruns here, but the two episodes of "Key & Peele" airing tonight feature some can't-miss sketches like "Mr. T. PSA" and "Bad Skype Connection," both of which deliver the serious LOLs. 8 P.M., COMEDY CENTRAL

COMEDY

'The Millers'

"Friends" creators famously titled every episode starting with "The One with..." phrase. The writers behind "The Millers" do it a little differently. This episode, where Nathan tries to be less self-involved, is titled, "You Are the Wind Beneath My Wings, Man." A beautiful play on a pop culture reference, but "You Are the Wind Beneath My Wingman" would have been funnier. Right?

Haters gonna hate

Pop culture. We ranked the top female celebrities by the online vitriol they inspire vs. their success.

As Taylor Swift's song goes, "the haters gonna hate (hate hate hate hate hate)." For some celebrities — like Swift — all that animosity wilts in the face of continued success, while for others — looking at you, Renee Zellweger — it's an obstacle they can't get past. We noticed that certain famous women constantly find themselves on the receiving end of a wave of negativity, despite putting out great work, and it's really kind of a head-scratcher. Why are some women perennial targets for haters more than others? And why do famous men get a pass from this kind of premeditated bashing?

Take Swift and Katherine Heigl, for example. They attract about the same amount of ire, but Swift keeps going platinum while Heigl has struggled since leaving "Grey's Anatomy" five years ago. With the massive success of Swift's "1989" last week and the premiere of Heigl's buzzy new show, "State of Affairs," next week, it's a perfect time to take a look at some of the more divisive female stars of today and see how all the toxic chatter is really affecting their bottom lines.

We broke down some of the most beloved to the most taunted celebrities to see how they stack up in the success department. Maybe you think we got something wrong, though? Like maybe Jennifer Lawrence isn't so infallible, or maybe we're all done beating up on Anne Hathaway now. Let us know in the comments at www.metro.us.

Angie Miller's debut EP, "Weathered," is available Wednesday. / BOSTON GLOBE VIA GETTY IMAGES

It's Miller time

Set free. Former "American Idol" contestant Angie Miller talks about her new goals and challenges after the cameras stopped rolling.

If you preordered Angie Miller's upcoming EP, you're getting a personal touch that you might not even know about. Miller, who rose to fame during the 2013 season of "American Idol," is addressing envelopes herself to send copies of her brand-new EP, "Weathered," which comes out Wednesday.

"My apartment is hilarious right now," she says. "It's me, my boyfriend and my best friend who are here, and there's a stack of T-shirts and a stack of CDs and envelopes everywhere."

Though Miller was not the first "Idol" hopeful to sing an original song on the show (we can't forget about General Larry Platt's "Pants on the Ground"), her original song, "You Set Me Free," was a breakout hit. After her elimination on "Idol" in the top three, Miller had talks with multiple record labels, but she says she opted not to pursue a deal because it would mean sacrificing her independence.

"I realized that getting a label deal and doing all of that stuff would take away from what I truly want to do, and I would have to compromise, and I know I wouldn't be in control of my career," she says. "I want to know everything that's going on, at least to start out. I want to make mistakes and learn how to do things right."

But didn't she learn all about the music industry from being on "American Idol"?

"Oh, gosh," she says, considering the question. "'Idol' was a very different world than the one I'm living in now. I didn't know a single thing about the music industry, and I was kind of left in the dark. I think 'Idol' is boot camp for performance, it's boot camp for doing interviews, it's boot camp for dealing with a lot of stress and still staying positive, but it's not boot camp for Music Industry 101."

"You Set Me Free" was uploaded to iTunes after her debut of the song on national TV. When asked how this might have helped her financially, she says, "Honestly, I don't even know. I have no idea."

"I'm very thankful for my time on 'Idol' though, and they got me all of my fans — all of my Dreamers, as I call them," she says. "I wouldn't be the artist that I am today without 'American Idol.'"

Six different ways

The 'Weathered' report

As for the artist she is today, "Weathered" showcases Miller's songwriting chops as well as her vocal chops.

"With this EP, I just think the most important thing out of everything is that when people listen to the six different songs, I want them to hear six different points in my life over the past two years," she says.

"Weathered" is also more artistically daring than the usual post-"Idol" fare. The title track is a building instrumental storm, almost reminiscent of The Cure, before Miller shouts an incantation through the fog. And it's over in about two minutes.

"I'm not a super commercial, bubblegum pop kind of girl. I wasn't even that on 'Idol,'" she says. "I did lots of singing in lots of places, growing up before 'Idol.' And I heard lots of no's and I didn't always win, and I think that was good. I think it prepared me, because you're not going to win at everything. I didn't even win at 'Idol.' Who knows if I'll ever completely win at something, but it doesn't matter. I can still sing! I'm not a huge fan of competition anyway. I just want to sing."

Happy holiday how-to Make this the most wonderful time of the year by taking these steps to avoid depression.

Flipping the calendar to November kicks off the anticipation, joy and fun of the two-month holiday season. But those same occasions can leave some people feeling less than jolly, whether it's because of the looming winter, the prospect of uncomfortable gatherings or not feeling like there is much to celebrate. We got some tips from wellness counselor Anne Parker, of Miraval Arizona Resort & Spa, on how to avoid holiday depression.

EVA KIS
@thisiskis
eva.kis@metro.us

Raise a toast, but keep it to just one glass. / THINKSTOCK

1 Dial back the drinking

Even though alcohol can have the effect of loosening us up, it is actually a depressant, Parker reminds us. "Alcohol consumption has a rebound effect on mood that is similar to sugar and can increase your melancholy and feelings of negativity."

2 Be careful of expectations

Expectations about how things "should be" are dangerous, particularly at holiday time when activities and events feel even more significant. "Remember to focus on the things that you can actually impact and let go of the expectations about things you can't control," Parker says.

A quick half-hour jog is an easy way to keep up with your exercise routine away from home. / GETTY IMAGES

3 Keep up your exercise routine

With gift-buying, decorating and planning trips, it can be tempting to move your usual workout routine to last place on your to-do list. However, this is the time when it is most important to make sure you are exercising regularly. "Exercise will keep your energy level up, release tension and support a positive mood," Parker advises. "Exercise is the No. 1 way to keep melancholy at bay!"

4 Enjoy the moment

Allow yourself to be fully present and engaged with holiday happenings. Focus on what is going on and fully enjoying what you have instead of dwelling on how you wish things could be. "If you are truly present, you give yourself the opportunity to discover, play, connect and enjoy!"

5 Start new traditions or transform old ones

If old traditions are no longer meaningful or just don't fit current circumstances, they can become a source of stress and conflict. Transform them to honor what is meaningful while creating something that fits what is important to you now.

Don't skimp on sleep. / MOODBOARD

6 Be well-rested

Sleeping is a basic self-care habit that is absolutely critical to warding off depression — it is also an easy thing to cut back on when the holidays are in full gear. Make sure you're giving yourself adequate time for nourishing sleep.

7 Set priorities

Or, in other words, don't sweat the small stuff! "Focus your attention and energy on what is most meaningful and congruent with the holiday experience you want to create for yourself and others," Parker says. "Putting pressure on yourself to have all the details and minutiae perfect is a quick way to plunge yourself into frustration, anxiety and a negative mood."

No. 8

Easy on the sweets

Sugar is abundant during the holidays, a time when we can easily justify a calorie splurge. But it can spike your energy, followed by a moody crash. Skip desserts like cookies and pies to avoid sugar-related highs and lows — reach for a piece of fruit instead, which has fiber that keeps your metabolism steady.

5 Things college freshmen would do differently in high school

Regrets. Learn from the mistakes of some recent high school grads.

College application season can seem like a blur for many students, as test prep, campus visits and filling out a seemingly endless stream of forms combine to create what can be a stressful start to senior year. The new startup AdmitSee collects and analyzes applications from students who were accepted to colleges and universities across the country. The site recently asked its members about what they would do differently if they had to apply to college all over again. Co-founder Stephanie Shyu shares their answers with us.

Find a summer internship or part-time job to boost their resumes

"A lot of students are just not aware of [the opportunities] that are out there," says Shyu. While internships are usually associated with college and graduate students, she says there are opportunities out there for high school students if they know where to look. AdmitSee is working to launch a resource guide for teens to help them connect to companies and positions that would be a good fit.

Start prepping for the SATs earlier

Well after graduation, many students still wish they had studied more for the SATs, says Shyu. Familiarizing yourself with the exam and the material it tests can go a long way. According to AdmitSee's data, many students say they wish they had begun prepping during their sophomore year or earlier.

A group of selective schools want to create their own college application

The new application would be aimed at the country's brightest students. / CREATAS RF

Each fall, thousands of aspiring college students fill out the Common Application — a single form that allows them to apply to over 500 colleges and universities across the country. But a group of some of the most selective schools in the country are working to create their own application that they hope will attract the brightest high school seniors out there.

The Chronicle of Higher Education recently discovered that officials from Harvard, Princeton and Yale, as well as representatives from other highly selective schools, formed a committee earlier this year to create a rival to the Common Application that would help schools "enroll the very best and most diverse freshman classes they can."

The Common Application was heavily criticized last year when users encountered several glitches and technical problems while filling out their applications.

But this new application reportedly won't be particularly common. The Chronicle notes that the current proposal would only be for private colleges with considerable financial aid budgets and public universities with high graduation rates.

The new application could be available as early as next year.

Common regret

Putting more thought into their application essays

The college admission essay is one of the only times during the entire process where the student has the opportunity to let his or her personality shine through. Taking the time to customize an essay for each school could make a big difference. Shyu also points out that many students use their essays to bolster the weak points in their applications. (For example: Did your grades suffer during your junior year because you had mono or were going through some family drama? There's no way for an admissions officer to know that unless you tell them.)

School clubs and sports are great ways to both explore new interests and make new friends. "I think that some students felt that they didn't join as many activities as they could have or that they weren't joining the right activities for them," says Shyu.

Visit every college you apply to

Shyu and her co-founder, Lydia Fayal, found that many students they talked to applied to colleges without ever visiting the campus. While it may be cost-prohibitive to visit schools across the country before being accepted, it's a good idea to plan trips to all of the local schools you are interested in. It's also recommended to keep a journal about each of your visits to keep everything organized.

History maker. This college freshman just became the youngest legislator in the country

While many 18-year-olds look forward to Election Day because they are able to cast their first-ever vote, the recent election was special for 18-year-old West Virginia University freshman Saira Blair because she was also looking to win a seat in the West Virginia House of Delegates.

Blair — who was born on July 11, 1996 — ran on a strictly conservative platform that was pro-guns, pro-business and anti-taxes. In a way, she's joining the family business: When she takes her oath of office in January, she will be joining her father, Craig Blair, in the House of Delegates. She will be balancing her legislative duties with her class schedule at West Virginia University, where she is studying economics and Spanish.

"I actually had a couple of geology classes this morning," she told Politico in an interview the day after her win. "It was fine, just like any other day of class."

In May, Blair had her first political victory when she beat a two-term incumbent in the Republican primary (later that month, she reached another milestone when she graduated from high school). Being a 'rookie' on the job may be key to success

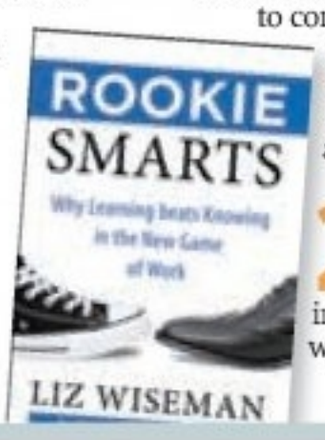
Career track. A former tech executive says new employees are the key to innovation.

The first few months of a new job are often filled with stress as the newcomer navigates his or her way through a sea of new faces, new rules and new challenges. But a new book argues that being the new kid on the block in a new company or field can also lead to increased creativity and some of the best moments of your career.

"When we're in this rookie mode is when we tend to do our very best work," says Liz Wiseman, the author of the book "Rookie Smarts: Why Learning Beats Knowing in the New Game of Work." "There's brilliance in it. A rookie move isn't a mistake or a disaster but is actually something that is innovative."

Here are some things real-life rookies should keep in mind as they navigate a new workplace.



1 Forget the idea of a honeymoon phase. "Rather than be nervous, [realize] that this is where you are going to do your best work," says Wiseman. "Instead of seeing those first six months as a write off, and kind of being in learning mode and not being expected to contribute, actually the first six months is when people are valuable."

2 Ask smart questions. "Start reaching out to people who know [the lay of the land]," says Wiseman. "And that humble request for help is likely to kick in somebody's mentoring genes."

3 Don't be arrogant. No one has made friends by bluntly criticizing the way things are done. "I think approaching anything by saying 'I have a better way' is not going to go over well," Wiseman notes. "I think the best approach, the humbler approach, is to think 'what can I learn from you, what can you teach me' and then just deliver fast and I think just show them."

4 Build a record of success. "You have to show you have a track record of success in rookie assignments," says Wiseman. "If you could show a trend of that, hiring managers will see that what you have is learning agility." Developing an ability to think quickly on your feet is key to success. As Wiseman notes, "learning agility is forever; skills are ephemeral."

New to the job? Now is the time to be creative. / FUSE

The time is now

Age is just a number

"It's never too late to be a rookie," stresses Wiseman. "Professionals who are able to use their hard-won experience but are still able to tap into their rookie smarts will build a culture of innovation."

Bigger companies usually have more opportunities to move up. STOCKBYTE

Size matters. The pros and cons of working at a large corporation instead of a small one

Have you ever wondered if the size of the organization you work for affects your career? It does.

There are benefits to working at both small companies (generally considered to be businesses with fewer than 100 employees) and large companies (those with more than 500 employees).

If you fall outside of the mid-size range, here are some of the major differences you'll notice:

Staff dynamic

Employees at a small company will usually get to know each other better and may develop an organization-wide sense of community and teamwork. They may also find it easier to develop relationships with most or all of the people at their office.

At large firms, staff are more likely to work on teams within departments or even different offices, making networking easier.

Levels of responsibility

Those who work at a smaller company may have more individual responsibility than their counterparts at large organizations. A small staff means that there are fewer individuals responsible for the company's operations, so the share of responsibility is greater.

Job descriptions

Along with a greater portion of responsibility, employees of small companies also have more varied workloads. One person might be responsible for managing several portfolios or platforms, while someone with a similar background at a larger organization may only be responsible for one or two projects.

Mobility and stability

Bigger companies typically have more opportunities for advancement within the organization. In comparison, staff at smaller companies can be more stable.

When it comes to ideal company size, there's no right answer. It's important to take time to reflect on your professional priorities to understand which is a better fit for you.

Election message anything but clear

Re: 'Obama needs to fix his policy' (Metro, Nov. 7) When letter writer George Christian says Obama's policies were on the ballot this election, he is right, but not how he thinks. After all, several (red) states passed increases in minimum wage, another state passed expanded background checks for gun purchases and Massachusetts opted to require paid sick time for workers. Most of these same states voted in Republican lawmakers who oppose (or flip-flopped on) these measures. In that light, the message of this past election is hardly clear.
CHARLES HALL, VIA EMAIL

What is the GOP angry about?

Re: 'Obama needs to fix his policy' (Metro, Nov. 7) So George Christian argues the election was a "stunning" defeat of "Obama's agenda"? What is that agenda? All I see is a guy who is trying to improve the quality of life of Americans. Stocks are up, gas is down, property values have rebounded, health care means more than it did and we are not in any major wars. What exactly is the percentage who voted Republican actually upset about?

Foles watch

Foles to be on sidelines

Nick Foles has a cracked collar bone, but that won't keep him from cheering on the Birds from the sidelines Monday. "The only reason he wouldn't be is [for fear of] a pile-up on the sidelines," Chip Kelly said. "Is he going to get hit and get hurt?"

3 Things to watch for as Eagles face Panthers

NFL. The Eagles take center stage Monday in prime time, with a new starting QB and a much healthier offensive line.

There's really a lot going on as far as Eagles Week 10 storylines are concerned.

Obviously there's a new starting quarterback, Mark Sanchez, who gets his first nod in over two seasons for the injured Nick Foles. He gives new flavor and a new slate of unknowns to this week's Monday Night Football matchup.

But there are a lot of other things going on that could make a much bigger impact. Sanchez is, after all, an experienced NFL veteran who played very well in the pre-season, and more or less has the same skill set as Foles does.

The Eagles defense has been adequate, ranking toward the middle of the pack in most categories.

Chip Kelly certainly hopes his pass rush, which actually is ranked among the league's best, can clamp down on the elusive Cam Newton.

The Panthers, 3-5-1, look to get back into things in a very mundane NFC South.

If the Eagles (6-2) have their way, they'll make it much harder with a win Monday night.

EVAN MACY
@evan_macy
evan.macy@metro.us

Unleash the 'three-headed monster'

The Eagles have returned to their run game, and it's no surprise their success on the ground has them at the top of the standings.

LeSean McCoy, Chris Polk and Darren Sproles each add a different dynamic to things offensively and they're playing behind a (mostly) healthy offensive line.

"When you took LeSean out and here comes Darren Sproles flying in the game, and then all of the sudden Sproles is out and here comes Polk in the game," Kelly said. "It's a nice luxury to have."

The Eagles also likely will get the return of Evan Mathis, and a second-straight start from center Jason Kelce.

McCoy has gotten a lot of help from his fellow running backs giving opposing defenses different looks. / ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Can Sanchez help reduce turnovers?

With Mark Sanchez now on the radar of defenses across the NFL, it's necessary to look at some of his negative tendencies from his days with the Jets. The quarterback turns the ball over at a pretty high clip and is vulnerable to a good pass rush (like the Panthers have).

But Foles turned the ball over a bunch too. Regardless of who is under center, the Birds have to minimize turnovers.

"We've come out of every game we've played knowing there are still things we need to continue to do to get better," Kelly said. "We feel, especially offensively, that we've left a lot out there on the field."

Lining up with linebackers

The Panthers have perhaps the best linebacking core in the NFL.

Keeping the pass rush and run defense at bay will be very important for the Eagles offensive line. It will also be important for the receivers, backs and tight ends to help mix things up and control things at the line of scrimmage.

First there's Luke Kuechly.

"I think Kuechly may lead the league in tackles," Kelly said. "He's a tackling machine. I think his worst year is 150 tackles, and I think it was when he was a freshman at Boston College. He led the NCAA in tackles. He's that type of guy. He's just always around the ball."

Then there's teammate Thomas Davis.

"They go together hand in hand," Kelly said. "They're on the field all the time. They don't sub and get into subpackages."

The Birds will also have to contend with defensive tackles Star Lotulelei and Kawann Short, as well as defensive end Charles Johnson.

Romo leads Dallas to win, 49ers prevail in OT thriller

NFL. The Cowboys seized first place again while the Saints are searching for answers.

All of Dallas' big guns showed up in London on Sunday during a 31-17 win as Tony Romo threw for 246 yards and three touchdowns, DeMarco Murray ran for 100 yards on 19 carries and Dez Bryant caught six balls for 158 yards and two touchdowns. Dallas improved to 7-3 on the year while Jacksonville is now 1-9.

49ers 27, Saints 24
A week after the Saints earned their first road win of the season, they were dealt their first home loss of 2014. Phil Dawson's 45-yard field goal would force overtime, where the 49ers would eventually grab victory thanks to an Ahmad Brooks strip-sack of Drew Brees.

Chiefs 17, Bills 13
Kansas City couldn't find the end zone until the fourth quarter but Jamaal Charles' 39-yard touchdown run with 13:30 remaining and Alex Smith's eight-yard scramble across the Buffalo goal line with 8:59 left gave the Chiefs a huge come-from-behind road victory.

Lions 20, Dolphins 16
Calvin Johnson returned from injury and looked 100 percent healthy as he caught seven Stafford passes for 113 yards and a touchdown. Miami, which dropped to 5-4, had just 222 yards of offense in the game.

Ravens 21, Titans 7
The Ravens (6-4) harassed Titans quarterback Zach Mettenberger early and often in Baltimore on Sunday as they sacked the rookie five times and only allowed him to throw for 179 yards.

Jets 20, Steelers 13
Michael Vick was more efficient than Ben Roethlisberger as Vick threw a pair of touchdown passes, without an interception, while Roethlisberger was picked off twice.

Falcons 27, Buccaneers 17
Atlanta (3-6) ended its five-game losing streak as Matt Ryan completed 20-of-31 passes for 219 yards and a touchdown in Tampa.

Peyton Manning looked awful Peyton-Manning like in Oakland, throwing five touchdown passes in the Broncos' sixth win. Emmanuel Sanders and Julius Thomas caught two scoring grabs each.

Cardinals 31, Rams 14
Arizona scored three fourth-quarter touchdowns to overcome a 14-10 third quarter deficit and avoid an upset against St. Louis. Drew Stanton led the comeback after starting quarterback Carson Palmer exited the game with a knee injury. METRO

Hamels decision key for Phillies

Will Hamels be a building block or trade chip? / GETTY IMAGES

MLB. Before the Phillies decide on their plan for rebuilding, they have to decide how Cole Hamels fits in.

The Phillies are moving on. At least that's what we think.

And the best indication from the Phillies' front office is that they all agree, six years removed from a parade down Broad Street, that the team must begin working on setting seeds for the next era of success in Citizens Bank Park.

Of all the assets the Phillies have — the vast majority of which are past their prime and overpaid — Cole Hamels offers Philadelphia the most to gain during "hot stove" period of free agency about to unfurl.

However, he is also the best pitcher on the team, the anchor of the starting staff, and is under club control for a long time to come.

In addition, Hamels is also 31, in his prime and could conceivably still be in his prime when the Phillies are able to contend. He also could serve as a mentor for young pitchers coming to Philly in the future, much as Jamie Moyer did in the years leading up to the World Series run in 2008.

Big spenders
$96M
Amount due to Cole Hamels over the next four years from the Phillies.

The price is high for Hamels. Even if the team is looking to move him, it will command quite the package to make it happen.

CSN's Jim Salisbury has cited industry sources saying "the Phils are looking for at least three top prospects, two that can play right now and another that isn't far away."

Two teams fitting this description are the Red Sox, poised to once again contend after one year of rebuilding, and the Cubs, obviously looking to leap forward under Joe Maddon.

It is expected that Hamels would be willing to waive his no-trade clause to go play for a contender.

Flyers nearly began six-day break early

NHL. The Flyers nearly blew a 4-0 lead Saturday, just prior to the start of almost an entire week free of games.

Brayden Schenn and Jerome Iginla got testy Saturday. / GETTY IMAGES

The Philadelphia Flyers started a rare six-day break on Saturday night.

The only problem was it began 20 minutes too early.

Leading the Colorado Avalanche 4-0 to start the third period, the Flyers seemingly checked out mentally and physically and nearly wasted two pristine periods before surviving with a 4-3 victory.

Former Flyer Max Talbot put the Avs on the board just 2:29 into the final period and Alexander Tanguay and Zach Redmond quickly followed suit to put the Flyers on their heels for the last 11:38 of the game.

While it wasn't pretty, the Flyers escaped unscathed, got their two points and made the break much more bearable than it would have been if they had collapsed and lost.

"Yeah, you would have been thinking about a lot," said Flyers coach Craig Berube. "It's definitely going to be a better five days [off] with a win."

The Flyers don't play another game until Friday, when Scott Hartnell and the Blue Jackets arrive. It's a chance for the team to rest up and heal some bumps and bruises and get in some quality practices.

At the same time the Flyers can't get too complacent.

"We have a good feeling going into this long break, which is nice," said goalie Steve Mason, who has won three straight starts. "We have to make sure we are working hard this next little while, because it's going to be tough getting up to the speed if we are not working hard in practice. So we have to make sure we are smart with it."

ERIC GOLDSTEIN

Defenseless

It's not safe to be a Philadelphia Flyers defenseman these days. The season is only 14 games old and the organization has already placed four blue liners on injured reserve and its top two prospects have also been injured playing in the AHL and juniors.

Kimmo Timonen started the string of bad luck this summer when he was diagnosed with blood clots, and he is likely done for the year. Braydon Coburn was hurt in the season opener and didn't return until Saturday, while Andrew MacDonald was injured late last month. Sam Morin, their first-round top pick in 2013, is nursing a broken jaw after getting hit with a puck.

Although the Flyers finally got good news with Coburn's return, they announced before Saturday's game that Shayne Gostisbehere, another top prospect, tore his ACL playing for the Phantoms on Friday and he could miss the remainder of the season. To top it all off, the team announced Luke Schenn will miss two weeks — with a likely sore shoulder — after an ugly hit from behind.

"Yeah it's tough to see," Steve Mason said of losing Schenn just after getting Coburn back. "Those are plays that can't really happen in hockey, guys are vulnerable in that position. Could be the slightest of pushes but when the guy's facing the boards it's a dangerous play. ... Nothing more serious happened to [Schenn]. Look forward to getting him back. The sooner the better."

ERIC GOLDSTEIN

Quoted

"It feels like one guy gets healthy and another guy goes down. But it's part of the game, unfortunately."

Mark Streit, Flyers defenseman

A MILLION REASONS TO Believe

Write a letter to Santa & help make wishes come true!

Bring your stamped letter to Macy's, addressed to Santa at The North Pole, and drop it into our special Santa letterbox — or create and send your letter online at macys.com/believe.
We will count all the letters received and donate $1 for each to Make-A-Wish®, up to $1,000,000.
Plus, we're asking America to wish big! When you send your letter to Santa online, you can be a part of the longest wishlist to Santa. To learn more, visit macys.com/believe #MacysBelieve
